How can a parent treat two children differently for the same issue?

By Stephen Richard and Mary Francen

This is a problem that is not only something that Age-play parents must face but one that bio parents come across as well so that being said we decided that it would be a fitting article for the APT. Why you're asking yourself? Well simple things that happen in one area of your life tend to overlap into the rest of your life as well. Weather they be from the parental point of view the child side you might have experienced this and we at the APT want to give as much information to our readership as possible on every facet of the Age-Play/Role-Play world as we can.

So being that I am the child in my Age-Play relationships I will be writing the part of the child's perspective and Stephen who is not only my Uncle but a Daddy as well will be writing from the adult side, it will hopefully give our readers both sides of the coin so to speak as to what happens when you have two children and you treat them differently for the same issue.

First we must stipulate that there are always variables that are never going to be the exact same with each family. Such as with my family I do not live with my uncle however his daughter does. I live very far away and see him once a year for a couple of weeks we communicate over the phone and on the computer daily so with those things in mind we shall set the scene now.

Now let us also agree that both "children" do in fact know about each other and the relationship between the parent.

Most "kids" do not like to go to sleep they want to spend as much time as possible with their "grownups" as possible and you can't do that if your asleep, also being asleep means that your going to miss out on something. The other problem that may arise between two sibling or more families is what happens when "Mommy/Daddy" goes out to spend time with someone else?

We will examine both of these very common issues because while they are common the reactions between multiple children families to both of them is vastly different, and thus so is the parents response.

Because we are talking about "Adult little ones" and not "bio-kids" we will also assume that both "kids" know better then to have temper tantrums over both of these issues even if they both do have said tantrums. What is the underlying cause for the tantrums from each of the children as each of them is different and as such each needs to be treated differently by the parent even though the situation is the same.

Lets say that child one has terrible nightmares and will not go to bed unless she knows that she is safe at night and lets say that child two has a terrible fear of being left. These two underlying fears could very well have been the catalyst for the temper tantrums over having to go to bed and over the parent going out to spend time with someone else.

Now let us say that child one has had a melt down temper tantrum being nasty and mean spirited towards you and perhaps even her sibling and child two has given you a hard time and also had a melt down temper tantrum over the same exact reasons that we mentioned above. Now just because we have an underlying cause that the parent is well aware of with regards to each of their children doesn't mean that the parent can allow the behavior to continue or allow them to get away with behaving in that manner.

Now while these are fictitious events we are using myself and my own uncle and his daughter as real people. The events and the "underlying causes" are make believe however so please keep that in mind.

So since we have already established that I do not live with my uncle and live far away from him, but his daughter does live with him. This would also mean that his handling of the situation would need to be adjusted accordingly.

Would it be as easy for him to take me over his lap and give me a good spanking as it would be for him to do with his daughter? No of course not because I see him once a year making me wait for that time period to receive a punishment like that is unrealistic and doesn't fit at all with the loving parental figure that I know him to be. So what does he do with me in a situation like that? What does any long distance parent do with a situation like that?

bed after you have put them to bed early.

It is the love and trust that has been built up between the "grownup" and the "child" that will determine the end result at this point.

My uncle could spank me over the phone or the computer having me do the physical end of the act while he does the instruction and the lecture just as he would with his daughter, he could also do the same other punishments but it is ultimately up to me as to weather or not I do what he has instructed me to do because he is not physically present to oversee any of the punishments that he meets out.

So in this case it might be much better for him to use a different approach with me then he would his daughter especially in the beginning of our relationship. Choosing to do punishments that have a physical result that can be seen with a photo for instance as proof that they were carried out by myself. This can be something such as handwritten lines that are different both in quantity as well as phrasing and each page numbered and a photo taken and sent to him or the actual pages mailed to him. it could also entail a spanking with photographic proof either being done in a video or over a web cam or a still photo taken with a digital camera and sent to him.

As the relationship progresses the trust is built up between the adult and the child both learning that what each other says they mean and will carry out and the need for "evidence" so to speak lessons with time and begins to drop off completely with the exception of a specific lesson to a specific misdeed.

Each girl still felt the love of the parent as well as the parents guidance in their lives within the family structure even though they are treated differently for the same action. Even though both girls have done the same crime it was needed that they be treated differently because they are different people with differing issues with regards to the family structure, however the end result is still the same. Both "children" know that the parental figure is not happy with the melt down temper tantrums and that the rules are there for the "child's" own good and the well being of the family and must be followed or they will have consequences to their actions.

What does he do with his daughter in a situation like that? That one is a bit easier to answer since they live in the same household physically. He has many options available to him in parental tool box. He can send her to bed immediately, he can ground her from her video games or toys or favorite TV shows, he can take away her treats for a day or so, he can give her a spanking right then and there and put her to bed with a sore bottom. He can tell her friends that they can't come over to play for a day or so, or he can take away a special trip out someplace that they had planned for that week. These things are very easy for him to enforce because he lives in the house with her if he chose to he could give her extra chores to do around the house for the rest of the week or even a spanking each night before bedtime to remind her who's the parent and who is the child and that rules are there for a reason. Many things are at a parents disposal when you are living in the same residence with your child.

But lets look at the flip side of that coin the side that has the parent and child not living in the same house and not in the same area. Then what options does the parent have when a situation like this arises? The parent must rely on the trust and honesty of the child when a punishment is meted out that it is being followed as directed.

This is when a relationship is truly tested the most, because in all honesty if the adult child doesn't want to do something no one can make them do it. They are not a bio-kid there is nothing to stop them from turning on the TV when they are on TV restriction or getting out of

Ask A grownup or Child

Dear Grownup or Child

Hi,
I am a grad student with 2 Iks (4 and 12). I am finding it harder to find socially acceptable outlets for them because the community I live in is small (like everyone knows everyone else and what brand of deodorant he or she prefers). so people know I am a grad student and if I act like anything else eyebrows get raised. it doesn't help that professors from school also live in this close community.

That said, do you have ideas about fun things an ik can do while still staying below the radar? I am already involved in a few online Age play groups and I am looking for more concrete things my IKs can do (not necessarily role play involving another person). Also, I keep ageplay completely g-pg rated because I am not married. thank you for your time.

Dear Grad Student

Without having more information such as whether or not you live on campus in a dorm or in a fraternity house setting or in your own apartment or at home with your parents I will give you this. Your home is your safe haven once there; you're free to do as you please so long as you have met your responsibilities.

Chances are those very same people who raise those eyebrows are just assuming that you are a fun loving goofy type person who might be a tad immature at times. So try not to worry to much about what they are thinking so long as you are not attempting to climb into a strangers lap you should be fine.

So far as concrete things that you can do under the radar go, there are plenty to do even in a small town setting. The very first is the movies, no one even glances at the person sitting next to them in a kids movie. Most of the time the parents in that theater are to busy trying to coral there own kids for the two hours. Also many people who do not have anything to do with AP/RP enjoy going to see Disney type movies.

The beach or amusement park/carnival again these are things that very few people have a dislike of and so far as building sand castles go there are world wide competitions for the making of them and those people don't have anything to do with Age-play, you can always say you wanted to give it a go. The rides at amusement parks or carnivals are again a great place to allow your inner kids a place to have some fun because everyone feels a bit younger when on those things so no one would bat an eye lash.

The park at night once the bio-kids have gone home. The reason I say it that way is because you do not have children yet and you don't want to draw attention to you being there without any. If your asked why your there... Simple your thinking about a term paper while swinging on a swing, lots of people need a way to contemplate things and being in college is a stressful experience there's nothing wrong with telling people that swinging on a swing helps you to distress if your asked by someone who finds you there. You would be surprised just how many "adults" go to the park and swing on the swings.

Arts and crafts projects are another good way to let the kids play if your inner kids enjoy that type of thing see if there is a class at the local rec. center and sign up, if not buy some kits at the store and make your friends and family some goodies. College kids are notorious for not having "money" so it will be expected that you would be looking for ways to soften the budget especially in this economy so that's another thing that works in your favor with the home made gifts. No one else needs to know the real reason that they were made or if they were made by your four year old, you're twelve year old or you.

Sticker collecting yup that good old fashioned hobby has a real following on the internet and some of those things from twenty years ago cost a bundle to boot. But its defiantly something that a twelve year old might enjoy doing, and the books well they just go into a book shelf so what would anyone else know.

I hope that some of this helped you out, but remember most of the time we are our worst critics and in this world of everything being politically correct we tend to assume that a raised eyebrow or a glance in our direction is a bad thing. It may very well be, but it also might not be. The main thing to remember is that so long as you are taking care of all of your responsibilities first and foremost then your okay. Because those people in that small town, well by now they are already well used to you as well as other college kids and there "weirdness".

In the world there will always be someone who is going to not approve of your or something that you do. The best advice is this. Play only in the sandbox. What that means is this, don't bring your play to the classroom and always do your class work to the best of your ability and on time, don't worry about what the teacher thinks of you outside of the classroom because they can't grade you on your actions other then in their room. The same goes for when you go out into the working world, don't bring play to work and don't bring work to play. Keep yourself above reproach when at work or school and don't worry about being "silly" when your not at work or school those are your times to do your own thing.

Confessions

Here I can be honest and admit to being a bad boy. I procrastinate in doing things I need to get done like cleaning my room and doing homework for school. I rush through things that I need to spend more time doing right and I make excuses for things that I do that are naughty instead of admitting that I've been bad. My parents did not believe in spankings but I wish they had because I certainly deserved them on more than one occasion.
Stephen C

am a naughty little boy who goes to the bathroom in his pants. I have been doing this for years and haven't been caught. I wish that mom would catch me in the act and deal with my bad behavior accordingly by spanking and strapping my bare bum. There...I've finally been honest about it.
Stephen C

Dear Stephen

It sounds like you are indeed someone who is in need of guidance in his life from what you have confessed to here. Keep in mind that you have taken the first step to correcting those things that you see as an issue in your life by admitting that they are in fact an issue.

The fact that your parents did or did not believe in spankings is irrelevant at this point in your life, you are a big boy now and even though you may not WANT to do your homework for school it is something that you NEED to do. Not because your parents or teacher tell you to do it but because it is part of being a responsible person who people can trust to do what is expected of them in life.

You are not a "Bad boy" you do things that are naughty yes, but you are not a bad boy. Even when you have done things that are naughty you still aren't a bad boy you simply have made the wrong choice. You chose the naughty one instead of the good one.

I would recommend that you either have a talk with your parents if you still live at home with them or find a close trusted friend with whom you can confide in when you do make a naughty choice and need to have some guidance. Just because we have reached the legal age of maturity doesn't always mean that we are ready to be let loose without any guidance into the world, there is no shame in seeking that guidance from a trusted source.

No one likes to clean Stephen it is one of those things that is just a fact of life and one that is unpleasant. It might help however if you make it a game. The next time you have to clean your bedroom set the kitchen cooking timer and pretend your having a race with someone to see how long it takes to get the room cleaned up and done properly. The reward for winning the race? Perhaps a trip to the ice-cream parlor or a movie rental. You can try this same reward method with the procrastination of things that you need to get done as well. Write a list of the things that need doing and check them off, when the list is done and done correctly as well as on time, you get a treat.

Best Wishes Stephen

I was not honest yesterday because I was afraid to be. I

Dear Stephen;

Your secret desire to be caught and spanked for having accidents isn't one that isn't shared by many people. If you're "Mom" is in fact your existing AP/RP partner and not a future partner then there are several ways you could go about setting up that to happen.

However, keep in mind that even if you are caught it doesn't mean that she will act in the manner that you are hoping she will. For instance she may not spank you for having that accident she may just put you in a diaper. It is very hard to judge someone's reaction to the unexpected.

My advice to you is to print this page out and give it to her and sit down and talk to her about your honest wishes and needs. Any relationship that you are in is based upon trust and communication. This doesn't mean that she will be able to fulfill your needs because not everyone can handle that level of age-regression in their AP/RP but it doesn't mean that the two of you can't work some arrangement out so that your wants and needs are met.

Best Wishes Stephen

High quality products and service make great pair

By Mary Francen

Fetware.com is a company that brings you adult protective incontinent garments that are user friendly and comfortable to wear at the same time. The company uses only 100 % virgin vinyl in the manufacturing of their products and customer tests all of their designs before making them available to the general public for sale.

While they claim to be expensive I didn't find their products to be overly expensive for what you were able to purchase, plastic panties in a wide array of colors some even in child like themes. They offer many other products as well for your needs and there shipping is extremely fast and discrete both in their billing which is done securely and with your privacy in mind.

I was able to purchase a single item and it arrived to my home within two days in a standard mailer with no distinguishing markings. There shipping prices were very reasonable and the item that I purchased was exactly as described on their website,

I will also note that for the particular item that I purchased it was the least expensive that I have found in all of my searching for this item.

The owners of the company are both very friendly and dedicated to customer service satisfaction with their products and their "brag page" is a testament to their hard work and dedication to bringing the best quality plastic incontinent products available to their customers.

You can find them by going to this address <http://www.fetware.com/aboutus.htm> where you will be able to read more about their company as well as find their online catalog which features things from plastic sheets for your bed in printed material as well as white to high quality cloth diapers that are great for overnight usage to the world wide known NUK MedicPro pacifiers and lace rumba panties many other wonderful products.

Playing and the play relationship

By Mary Francen

Play is a big part in the word Age-Play or Role-Play words themselves so how important is "Play" to those relationships? Can they sustain themselves without actual playing and if so for how long a time period?

What defines the actual term play in regards to those lifestyles? Is it merely just a word or is it something more? Is it the act itself or is it just a term used to describe the relationship?

We have already established in earlier issues of the APT that Role-Play is something that two or more people partake in where they are acting out a scene most times pre-set up. And that Age-Play is where one or more of the people involved is playing an age that is not their own biological age.

So with those parameters already known and in place what else determines the word "play" or "playing" and can it be taken from the relationship and still have the relationship function without falling apart at the seams?

If you have a standard relationship that is based solely on the computer where both partners meet in a set place such as a chat room or through emails only and most of the conversation is "play" based, then the likelihood that the relationship could withstand the removal of the play aspect of the relationship is nil.

The reasoning for this is because the participants behind the screens aren't there for more then just "play" in reality they are just there for fun and not the longstanding "biological feeling" aspect of a relationship. If they were then the relationship would move to more then just the computerized version and it wouldn't consist of mostly "play (playing)" during the times that they communicate with each other.

Now if you have someone who lives in the same residence with there "playing partner" but also isn't married to them or in a formal relationship with that person such as a boyfriend/girlfriend type of situation with them and you remove the "play" aspect from the relationship what remains is just a friendship because the two of them have formed a bond that transcends the normal ap/rp bounds due to the living arrangements.

If you have a married couple where ap/rp was prevalent and then the "play" was removed from that relationship you would just have you're a typical marriage left behind with perhaps a touch of resentment if the play aspect was removed by only the choice of one of the partners and the other secretly holds back their feelings on it being a very big part of the desire to be with that person in some form. Often times couples tend to mix the bedroom and ap so that could lead problems in that area of their life as well if the "play" aspect is removed whereas it may not be the same as with the previous mentioned situations.

It is not an impossibility that either of these situations can survive if you remove the "play" from them however it does make all of them more difficult when they started out with "play" being a part of them in the first place. If play was a very large part of the relationship then it makes the success rate even harder to achieve if you take it away.

It's like a plant that you once fed only the best food and fertilizer to and then suddenly stopped doing those things to it and only gave it tap water. Eventually the plant would start to show signs of problems even though it was still getting sunlight and water. Take away something that the plant started out growing up with and knew all of its plant life and eventually it will show you that it's not happy about that by not giving you back the prettiest flowers that it once did even though it still blooms.

The trip of a life-time Chapter two~ Arrival

By Mary Francen

The inside of the car was just as pretty as the outside and extremely private with windows that one could look out but no one from the outside could see into the limo from. Salena's eyes went wide as she saw the adult sized car seat in the limo as well as a changing table and several toys strewn about instead of the A typical bar that would be in a limo.

The car was done up in a rainbow of colors some soft colors some in bright tones with many different textures. The only thing that this limo had in common with its counterparts was the normal TV/VCR's and the small fridges.

She immediately started to explore her new surroundings while George watched her from the bench seat that went along the very back of it. He wanted to give her a few moments to get acquainted with what would be her norm this weekend before he dealt with what needed to be.

After a few minutes George decided it was time he could see that she was starting to get a bit overwhelmed and needed some reassuring. "Sally come here to Daddy please." He held his hands out to her as he smiled at her to encourage her to come to him.

Salena at first didn't move from her spot in front of the small fridge and snack bar she was sitting Indian style on the floor of the limo her fingers playing with the textured carpeting. "Come pumpkin sit in Daddy's lap he has a snack here for you in your bag." George reached into her bag next to him and pulled out a small box of cookies that he had brought with him and showed the box to her. He knew these were her favorite kind.

Salena's tummy was a bit hungry and the second that she saw the animal cracker box in his hands her lips parted and her smile grew. Moving closer to him she sat on the floor of the limo and reached up and grabbed at the box in his hand.

George handed her the cookies after opening up the box for her as well as the bag inside of it. "Here you go pumpkin, eat nice for Daddy please and when your thirsty you let Daddy know he has a drink in here for you too okay?"

Nodding her head as she ate the head off a tiger while her mouth was full of cookie Salena sat with her back to him not being used to sitting backwards in a car it was making her tummy feel funny to face him while the car moved in the opposite direction.

George ran his hands over the top of her head smoothing her hair out which had gotten a bit mussed up with her roaming around the cars many nooks and crannies. "Are your cookies good pumpkin?" he asked her when he saw that she had eaten more than a few of them. "Are you thirsty now? Do you want a juice box now? Or would you like some cold milk?" George knew the limo was fully stocked with milk whenever it picked clients up and he had brought with him a sippy cup for her to use if she wanted a drink like that.

"Yessss chocolit!!!" Salena exclaimed with a full mouth of cookie as soon as the milk question was posed to her as she spun her head around at the same time to look at him grinning from ear to ear cookie crumbs on her face.

"Okay you may have some chocolate milk but you have to sit up here and drink it with me so it doesn't get spilled on the pretty carpet of the car pumpkin, George patted the seat he was sitting on and then got up and made his way to the fridge and prepared the sippy cup for his daughter and brought it back to her.

"Here you go pumpkin your favorite chocolate milk." He was happy to see that she had moved to the bench seat while he was at the fridge and was sitting with her legs curled up under her as she had been on the floor, she seemed to be getting a bit more at ease with her surroundings as one hand played with the hem of her skirt and the other ate a cookie from the box.

George sat down next to her and handed her the bright pink sippy cup, the top was her other favorite color purple and had glitter throughout it. He also was pleased that it brought a smile to her face when she saw the color he had chosen when she took it from his hand.

"What do you say Sally when someone gives you something?" George prompted her when he saw that she had forgotten her manners.

Salena was pre-occupied with her cookies and milk and through the cup she peeked over it at George and mumbled "thankyoudaddy" through a full mouth from cookie and sippy cup.

"Remember no talking with your mouth full pumpkin; you might choke on your food." George gently chided his daughter as he moved her a bit closer to him by placing his arm around her shoulders. "You are very welcome and I am glad that you like the cookies and milk pumpkin." He smiled at her this time the chiding gone from his voice as he saw the frown on her face leave when he smiled at her it made his own heart melt a bit.

A few minutes later Salena felt herself become sleepy, the plane ride and the excitement all catching up with her now as her body started to relax in his arms along with the milk and full tummy a yawn escaped her lips before she could stop it. "Is Daddies baby sleepy?"

George had caught the yawn just as he had felt her body become more and more relaxed as she continued to eat and drink her snack in his embrace.

Shaking her head Salena looked up at him and gave him a frown. "Nooo Daddy! I not sleepy." She told him as firmly as she could muster though the jet lag and lack of sleep from the night before was taking its toll on her system.

"Well Sally Daddy thinks it is time to get you changed now so up you go and over to the changing table please." George helped to move her over to the area set up in the limo that was made for adults but looked just like any other changing table that one would see for toddlers and babies and just as brightly done up.

He buckled her into the table so that as the car continued on the way to the B&B she wouldn't fall off the table and lifted her skirt out of the way and pulled down and off, the frilly pink panties that she wore over her diaper as he had instructed her to do.

"Now Sally, Daddy needs to have a talk with you Miss so please put your listening ears on for Daddy." George spoke to his daughter a bit firmly as he untapped her diaper and could see that it was very wet indeed as he pulled the front of it down and away from her body.

"I know a little girl who hasn't been behaving very good while she has been playing and Daddy thinks that she needs to have a talk with him about some things before we get to the vacation house because Daddy doesn't want to see her continue to do the same things that she has done before while playing with her friends." As George spoke the sentence to his daughter he flashed to the first few times that he had seen Salena in the chat room on the server that the two of them had met in. She was at first very shy and sweet but quickly fit right in with the other kids in the room.

She became the life of the AP party but he could see that she was out of her element and hadn't any clue when it came some of the basics, her complete innocence showed through the computer screen and it was very endearing to him. However it was also something that while it drew out the protective nature in him and had helped to make him wish to adopt her it was something that had also caused some issues with the other kids as well as some of the adults in the chat room.

Salena now on the changing table and feeling very much the four year old Sally Jones as her Daddy started to change her wet diaper lay with the sippy cup in her mouth her eyes looking around the limo and up at the twinkling lights in the limo's ceiling as George started to speak to her.

She blushed as she felt the moment that he had lifted her skirt over her legs and she felt her face get hotter as he pulled down her frilly baby panties, a whimper escaped her throat as he untapped her diaper. She was nervous it was the first time her Daddy had done this himself and while it was something she wanted very badly she couldn't help but wiggle a bit as she felt the diaper pulled away from her body.

"It's alright pumpkin." George soothed her as he lifted her legs and removed her diaper and placed a clean one under her bottom and pulled some wipes from the container in the wall of the limo and started to clean her bottom with them.

The sensation of warm moist wipes that were specialty items in the limo against her bottom and the gentle touch of her Daddy helped to calm Salena who had tensed a little bit in her nervousness when George had started to mention having a discussion with her.

George felt her relax again as he began the cleanup process and knew that it was time to begin his discussion with her. "Sally, remember Daddy wants you to keep your listening ears on for him while we have our discussion alright pumpkin." George smiled as Salena nodded her head while she continued to suck on the sippy cup he had given her earlier. "Good girl, now Sally Daddy wants to talk about the things that happened at the airport and on the plane. Remember we have talked about how important it is to pay attention to the grownups in charge of you. Like when the Captain told everyone to put their seatbelts on and when Daddy told you to stay where he could see you at the airport."

As George spoke to his daughter he inserted "Mr. Thermy" into her bottom and waited while it counted out her temperature he saw that the whimpering he often heard and saw her do while in chat logs was very much real as was the blush on her face.

Salena nodded her head as George spoke to her and the moment her Daddy placed the tool that he had started to use as a reminder from the very first time he had diapered her online near the entrance of her bottom she whimpered knowing that she had been naughty at some point and he was punishing her now while he had his discussion with her. It made her blush each time that she did the punishment at his instruction in her own home, now that he was administering it himself she couldn't help but start to wiggle and whimper as tears started to fall down her face just as her Daddy finished pushing Mr. Thermy into her bottom and wiggled her bottom frowning up at him slightly.

"Yes I know Daddies pumpkin doesn't like Mr. Thermy in her bottom, and Daddy doesn't like to have to give her a reminder when she hasn't listened to grownups who are in charge either." George almost stopped the punishment as his heart melted when he realized that the play that the two of them was just as real in person as it had been over the computer and it melted his heart and made him smile as he loved that sweet innocence about her. "Daddy wants his little baby to remember when we are at the vacation house to listen to him and do as she is asked to by the grownups or she will be punished for being a naughty girl and What happens to naughty little girls Sally?" George took his hand away from the tool he was using to punish his daughter his daughter and reached over her and removed the sippy cup that she was chewing on from her mouth. "Sally, answer Daddy please what happens to naughty little girls? Who don't listen to there Daddy?"

George knew that he needed to ground Sally to their relationship that was online now that they were in the real world with it or she wouldn't be able to fully relax around him or the others at the B&B for the weekend... So he needed to stick to the protocol that he used with her when she had been naughty and had to handle the actual act of the discipline herself with his guidance.

With a sniffle to her voice and a frown on her face as George held her hand away from her face that held her sippy cup which she was enjoying the comfort of chewing on throughout the diaper change she answered his inquiry. "get punished daddy"

Smiling at her George released her hand and watched as she went right back to drinking the milk in the cup. "That's right they do pumpkin very good. So Daddy wants Sally to remember to be his good little girl and remember to listen to him and the grownups that Daddy tells her to listen to while we are on vacation, Okay pumpkin can you remember that for Daddy?" George smiled as she nodded her head but made no move to stop her task with the sippy cup. "Thank you pumpkin that's Daddy's good girl."

George returned his attention to his daughters bottom removing the thermometer and placing it on a wipe that he had laid out on the table, he applied the cream to her bottom from the pop up jar in the limo's changing table and then used the baby powder from her own diaper bag before pulling the diaper up between her legs and fastening the tapes on each side.

"Now lets get you dressed again Pumpkin and then you can snuggle in Daddy's lap for the rest of the car ride alright?" he pulled her frilly little girl panties back up and then pulled her skirt down and released the belt that crossed her tummy keeping her in place on the changing table and held his arms out to her. "Come sit with Daddy Sally."

Salina didn't need any more encouragement than that she let George help her off the table and guide her over to the long bench seat of the limo and as he sat down she sat herself right into his lap snuggling into his arms and drifted to sleep for the rest of the car trip.

An hour later the car was pulling up to the front steps of the specialty bed and breakfast as George gently began to wake his sleeping daughter. "Sally, pumpkin we're here. The car rides over time to wake up sleepy head." He smiled down at her as her eyes opened and she yawned sleepily up at him and began to stretch in his arms rolling onto her tummy in his lap as she did her stretch to wake up fully.

George playfully patted her diapered bottom and rubbed her back as the driver shut off the car and opened the door for them both the sounds of laughter and playing were heard and immediately Salena's mind was fully awake and she wanted to go exploring as she scooted towards the door that was held open for her.

George smiled as he watched her exit the car and look around the large property and up at the house with its wrap around porch and large front lawn and sweeping driveway. It was a beautiful estate property with a good bit of privacy for its cliental.

"Daddy go play!" As overwhelming excitement swept up Salinas body and she became flush from head to toe from the rise in blood pressure she had spun around and jumped up and down declaring her intentions to George.

"Not just yet pumpkin we have to get settled in then you will get to go and play with your friends." George smiled as he watched her reaction and took her hand in his and walked to the front door of the house. George wanted to show her their rooms and get her changed into play cloths before he let her loose to play with the friends that they were meeting for the weekend.

As the two of them walked through the front door, they were greeted by the owner of the B&B and the house's German Shepard Max. "Hello George, Hello Sally, Mr. Carmen greeted them both with a smile, his wife was behind the front desk on the phone at the moment but would greet them both shortly.

"Hello Tom, its good to see you again", George smiled and shook his friends hand while Salina was transfixed on the big white dog at the mans side. "Sally please say hello to Mr. Carmen, and that is Max pumpkin."

"Hi Mr. Carmin hi Max you pretty." Salina smiled as she played with the dog not to interested in the adults or what either of them had to say to her at the moment.

George got the two of the checked in while his daughter played with the houses dog who greeted each guest as they entered the B&B. "Okay Sally its time to go to our rooms, say goodbye to Max for now pumpkin." Holding out his hand to his daughter he smiled at her waiting for her to take his hand.

Sally ignored her Daddy she was having fun playing with the dog he liked playing tag and the two of them had been playing it around a big table while her daddy was talking to the grownups.

George shook his head this was the kind of thing that he had noticed right off with Salina that drew him to her in the first place, her complete child like innocence when she played. He walked over to her and took her hand forcing her to stop her chasing of Max and to stand next to him. "Sally, what is the rule about listening to the grownup in charge of you?"

Salina pouted when she felt George take her hand and Max got away which meant that he won the game. "Daddy Max winnn" she whined up at George still transfixed on her game with the dog as George stood her in front of him and asked his question of her. "Yes Sally, Max did win the game because its time for us to go to our rooms now." George led his daughter towards there rooms for the weekend where he would have a talk with her as he got her ready to go and play with her friends.

George held onto his daughters hand all the way up in the elevator keeping her from pressing the buttons and as they walked down the hallway to their rooms he guided her keeping her focused on him and not on the noise from the lounge on their floor or the noise from the backyard. As he opened the door to there suite he guided her into the room and closed the door behind them flipping the latch that was out of her reach and walked her into the sitting room. "Sally, Daddy wants you to sit on the couch Miss while Daddy gets some things ready in your room and do not move." George sent her to the couch with a swat to her diapered bottom.

Salina knew that her daddy was mad at her when he called her Miss he didn't have to give her bottom a spank for her to know that she was in trouble. She didn't say anything but scooted to the couch as fast as she could so that she didn't get anymore spanks from him.

George was happy to see that she had gotten so comfortable in the real world play so quickly but he also knew that he couldn't allow her to get away with things that he wouldn't allow her to get away with in their online play. So as he entered her room and began to unpack her things that he had brought with him and set them up for her, he thought about how to handle her breaking the same rule again.

Walking back into the living room area he walked over to the couch and held his hand out to her. "Sally come with Daddy please it's time for a talk in your bedroom Miss."

Real life issues and the AP child. A grownup's nightmare?

By Mary Francen

Let's say that you have been going to an online chat room and in that room you have met many people with whom you have become friendly with, one in particular seems to stand out to you and you decide to spend some time with them. Lets say for this story's sake that over the course of six months time that you have been playing with them and that you have either decided to "adopt" or that you have just decided to be their caregiver when your in that room.

What you don't realize is that the person that you have met and have been talking to for six months now online on a daily basis sometimes for hours at a time is not only "true" to how they seem on the computer but that the same things that the "child" that you are interacting with is in fact the way that the "adult" behaves as well in reality when they aren't on the computer.

Many times I have been in a chat room and seen people come in as there little selves and seen them behave as if they don't lets use "take a bath, eat even or take medication" as an example here and I have actually become friends with these people only to find out that those things that what I thought were just "play scenes" were in fact true with the adult that I had become friends with.

Now as the readers of the APT know I am not a grownup in my play but I have had to actually get "onto" some of these same friends in order to see that they took proper care of themselves in situations where they should know better and be doing it on their own.

Worse yet are the same "littles" who are constantly injuring themselves in the play scenes in order to obtain the attention of the "bigs" even when the adults in the room aren't their own adults. It isn't uncommon for many adults to go into those same chat rooms and do small things for many of the "littles" in the rooms such as play games or tell stories or even discipline children who act up mildly aka baby-sit kids but it isn't usually a good idea to expect a stranger to take complete care of you especially if that adult is one new to that room or two already has "kids" of their own.

We have broached this topic before in the APT about personal responsibilities and not expecting someone else to do your own things for you in your AP/RP relationship unless THEY have asked to do those things first.

It is important to remember that while there are many "littles" in the world there are not that many "grownups" for one thing especially in those online chat rooms and this is one of the reasons because they enter them and are swarmed by "littles" who think that just because they are a "grownup" they are going to take care of the needs and wants of every child in the room.

The AP/RP world must be fun for all concerned or what reason do people have for partaking in it? In other words people unless YOUR grownup wants to be in charge of making sure that you have taken your meds, eaten your meals etc. in real life please do not assume that the "grownups" that you meet or are even friends with online wish to do those things.

Your needs/wants are NOT any more important or less important then those of the other people in that chat room or relationship. Now I am not saying that there aren't "grownups" who don't want to do those things for "littles" because there are. However you can't assume that they all do.

And you can't assume that they want to do it right off, let them be the one to talk about care-giving needs and wants with you. Don't just push it onto them. Remember communication goes both ways and it is the key to making any relationship be a successful one. While you may want/need someone to truly care for you in those ways to make sure that you do the things that are important in your adult life if it also important to remember that it isn't going to be every single person that you come across who is going to be able to fulfill that desire/need of yours even if in play form they seem like they want to.

Public chats a wonderful place to fulfill our AP/RP wants/needs but they are also a place that you can build long lasting friendships and gain valuable advice from others who are in similar situations as yourself. While not everyone is a struggling collage age individual living in a dorm room, or a parent of bio-children and a spouse who is vanilla everyone in those chats has life experiences of there own and if you take the time to listen instead of concentrating soley on your own self needs/wants you will be able to see that they are truly a community amongst themselves that is widely spreading to become a wonderful support network for those in the AP/RP lifestyle.

Quiet punishments for times when a sound spanking wont do

Lets all face facts in that most AP/RP "littles" have a naughty streak to them that is at least a quarter mile wide. The basic reason is because we are attempting to mimic "bio kids" and as we all know biological children don't know any better and as they don't know its not a good idea to just go off and play without telling Mommy or Daddy, well the same type of thing is something that an AP/RP child would attempt to recreate because of the innocence factor involved. Its part of the draw to the AP/RP world, the mystique of being young again the magic that you felt as a biological child in exploring the world around you.

However the reality is that while our Age/Role play parents would love to give us "kids" a good hard and long spanking sometimes for the naughty behaviors that we exhibit but there just isn't a time or place that its possible without putting it off for a much further time period. So what do you do when that situation arises?

Simple you come up with punishments that are just as "bad" to the "adult child" as a spanking would be. These are the punishments that we are going to be talking about in this article. Punishments that can done in a semi public place, such as hotel rooms that don't offer sound proofed walls, backseats of cars and vans public bathrooms, apartment buildings where you don't have great sound proofing between units, houses with roommates who aren't involved in the lifestyle or there are bio-kids in the next room sleeping.

We will start off with the most basic of punishments and lead up to the more unusual and ones that you can combine with the basics to create an entirely new punishment.

Now some of the punishments that are going to be mentioned are geared more for relationships that are based where the "parent" has direct contact with the "child" and can physically do some of the mentioned things. However even if the parent is not in the same household most of the punishments are still very viable if both parties are completely honest with each other. Yes little ones that means if your parent sends you to bed you actually have to stay there I'm sorry to say no matter how badly you want to get back on the computer and talk to your friends or get up and watch that movie on HBO.

Timeout~ This one sounds pretty straight forward doesn't it however a timeout can be anything from taking away a DS game system for a little bit, to sitting someone down on the couch for a half an hour. Or even making them sit bare bottomed on the bathroom toilette seat while the lid is closed for ten minutes. It can be much more complex as well which we will get to a little bit later on.

Timeouts can be extremely useful because they offer both the punishment as well as thinking time. Or as some would call quiet time or time to just settle down, depending on the needs at the time that it is given. Also a timeout even given to someone who has people in their home with them is not only still a viable punishment but in fact it is an excellent one. Why because that person will wish to avoid having to sit on the couch in a public space in the home while others are going by. They will also have to come up with some reason on a non kink level as to why they can't do something when asked until said timeout is over so it makes it something that they will wish to avoid at a pretty high level.

Temperature taking~ This one sounds like it couldn't possibly be a punishment because of the modern day equipment available on the market, however I assure you that even with the digital era that we are in you can still find an anal thermometer at your local store. They come in the digital kind that will beep when it has finished taking the temperature of the naughty/sick person but you can also if you do enough searching find the good old fashion kind as well.

The act itself can be a punishment depending on the person that you are doing it on however for some it needs to have things added to it, such as leaving it in longer then the required amount of time while the naughty "child" is over either your lap or a appropriate sized footstool that gives the illusion of being over a grownups lap. You could also add a touch of something that in some homes is called "Naughty Girl/Boy cream" or as it is better known as Icy Hot or mineral rub to the length of the thermometer before inserting it into the bottom. The cream would cause a slight burning sensation even though they aren't really getting burned, and while being in that familiar position of OTK a feeling of helplessness of the situation being out of their control. Add a bit of a wiggle to the thermometer while it is inserted into the bottom "I would only recommend this if it is the non breakable kind such as the digital readout version" and you have a very uncomfortable punishment time.

Punishment Panties~ This one may sound a bit odd however if you think about it, the use of panties that you do not usually wear can be an extremely useful punishment. This can be a thong for those who do not usually wear them or for those who do, the use of full cut panties. This punishment can also be taken to the use of no panties allowed for those who are easily embarrassed by the feeling of being naked even though they are dressed or for those who do not normally wear panties the having to wear them. This punishment works well when you are punishing for the day or longer as it is a constant reminder to the one being punished no matter where they are at that they have done something naughty.

Being sent to bed early~ This one is pretty basic, and it fits into every day life with out to much of a problem even in a situation where there are other people living in your household. It is easy to tell someone else that you are "tired" and retire to your room early. However the reality being that as you lay in bed an hour or maybe even two before you normally would be because you have done something naughty is much different you feel very much like a naughty child. This punishment works especially well if you have roommates in your home because just as when you were a bio-child and you were sent to bed early for being naughty and you heard all of the normal goings on in the household you will still hear all of the things that everyone else in your household is doing but you are unable to partake in because you had been naughty.

The Loss of privileges~ This can be anything from watching the TV program that you watch every week to the computer to the video game that you're addicted to playing and yes it can even be the loss of freedom to go someplace. Some would call it grounding or a larger form of timeout.

This punishment is one that is a tad harder to work out for those who are in relationships that the partner is vanilla or they have bio-children of there own to take care of, however it is also something that works out very well if the right "trigger item" is found out and applied.

For instance if the persons passion is the game World of Warcraft, not being allowed to play that game for a week long period is something that even someone who has their own bio-children can be punished with and no fear of it getting in the way of that real life responsibility.

Spanking~ Yes even a spanking can be done in a quiet manner if the right tool is used for the job and the person being spanked is a quiet spankee. Take for instance a flyswatter, they do not make much noise when they are applied to a naughty bottom however when they are used for an extended period of time they will build up a pretty good stinging sensation that will leave the spankee feeling it for a little bit. While they are not as quick to cause the same feelings as a hairbrush would they can be useful as well when something that is on a quieter scale is needed.

The plastic rod from a mini blind is also quiet yet painful and will leave a mark that bites a bit similar to that felt by a switch or light cane. Someone that is asleep or doing some other activity in the room down the hall will not hear the use of this item on a bare bottom as they would a paddle or belt.

Another way to add to this "quiet" punishment is the use of a gag or punishment pacifier it helps to keep the spankee from yelling out as you apply the correction to their naughty bottom while allowing them the freedom to cry, of course they can also do the old trick of crying into a pillow or favorite cuddle friend while the spanking is going on to help keep the noise of their punishment from going beyond the walls of their bedroom as well. If a TV or stereo is present in the room turning that on also cuts down on the possibility that any noise at all would be heard two doors down, it doesn't need to be overly loud either sometimes the even noise is the one that drowns out the most racket.

Rubbies~ This is a punishment that takes some time and thus is one that can be very effective while being done along with a lecture. One naughty "child" OTK or laying face down on the bed, or over a footstool, bare bottomed. The "grownup" applies pressure while rubbing the bottom vigorously for an extended period of time. This will start to cause the same effect that a spanking will in the bottom. It will get red, it will build up heat and the naughty one will start to squirm and feel punished by you.

You can add to this punishment by adding some naughty cream to the area that your are doing the rubbies on which will also start to cause that "burning" sensation as the friction from your rubbing builds up in the bottom in question. You may also try adding pats for an extended period of time not swats but just pats to the same area over and over again for a very long period of time. In other words rub for a while then pat, pat, pat, pat, rub for a while longer and return to the patting and keep repeating this process for about an hour or more. The combined actions listed above will cause the bare bottomed recipient to feel very punished by the time you have finished and their bottom will look just as if you had given them a short hard spanking.

Plugs~ While for some this may be a sexual pleasure for a lot it is not and will be an extremely useful punishment. There are a great many types of anal plugs on the market everything from vibrating to ones with ridges on them to ones that you use just for probing. The sizes and colors and types of material that they are made from vary just as much and can be helpful with the punishment as well. Depending on the person with whom you are using it on, someone who enjoys one type of plug for a sexual pleasure may not enjoy another and it is that one that would be useful for punishment purposes.

A plug can be used for any set amount of time that the grownup sets and they can be used in any situation from going out doing the things that need done throughout the day to being sent to bed for a nap and yes even over night.

A Non-Spanking~ Okay this one looks funny I know but think about it many people share both a fascination for spankings as well as Age/Role play, if they enjoy getting something then think about it, it makes perfect sense not to give it to them when they have done something naughty doesn't it?

In fact for many "brats" this is an extremely torturous punishment and it can be incorporated into being made to lie OTK or bare bottomed on a bed or over an ottoman or footstool while getting a lecture and yet no spanking ever comes. This punishment works even on those who do not enjoy the spanking kink, because just the motions of an impending spanking heighten the senses of someone and put them on edge.

Diapers, Pull-ups~ This punishment can be done on any "child" even those who aren't of the age regression that would normally be wearing them. You can make them wear them and have to ask you permission to use the "grownup potty" or make them use said diaper or pull-up depending on your own desires as the one giving the punishment.

Pull-ups can be worn anywhere at any time and work for anyone both for those who do not have their "grownup" directly physically in their presence when they are being punished and for those who do. They also allow the person to go about their normal daily routine without to much issue while still knowing that they are being punished by their grownup, as the pull-up is a reminder each time they use the potty that they are indeed a "child" and subject to the rules that they broke and earned said punishment in the first place for.

A diaper is a good way to help your naughty little one realize that they are not in control of everything and that there are something's that you as their grownup need to help them with. Diapers work very well when it comes time for bed or naps especially because of the realization that a very small child needs one to go to sleep with so that no accidents happen during the time period that they are in bed.

This punishment works very well when mixed with being sent to bed early, it adds that feeling of yes I am a small child who has been naughty and I am in trouble and Mommy/Daddy/Aunty/Uncle etc. has put me to bed early and I don't like it at all.

This is excellent for those times when something extremely naughty has been done by those who are of the slightly older age/role play range because it brings the embarrassment factor into play as well. It helps to remind them that they are always their grownups baby no matter what and not to get too big for their britches so to speak.

Essays or Lines~ This punishment is of course one that we all remember not to fondly from our time in school. What teacher didn't hand out a report due usually on a Monday. Or for those times when you just really annoyed the teacher to no end you were given the nasty assignment of hand writing out "I will not ---" fill in the blank with what ever miss dead you had done.

Well even now as we all pretty much have at our disposal computers at a pretty regular time frame these punishments are very effective. Your kids don't need to know why you are REALLY doing a five page report on the rainforest.

Lines are pretty easy to hide the fact that you are doing them from the busy eyes of those around you as well. A great many people journal and keep it private, a private journal book for those times when your "grownup" assigns hand written lines takes care of the prying eyes of roommates or bio-kids. And gone is the excuse of "But Daddyyyy I can't write out a hundred times I will not stomp at you cause Jane will see itttt."

Internet Cut Off~ This is a particularly evil punishment for most "littles" the computer has become the new playground for most age-players because here in cyber land we are able to be what ever age we play at. We are able to see ourselves as being 3,5, 13 etc. we are able to be creative and playful and do the things that we see in our minds eyes.

As a lot of Age/Role players have many friends through out cyber land in various forums and chat rooms having the internet cut off for a period of time is pretty much the equivalent as cutting off there ability to go to the park.

This punishment can be done if the parent knows the littles passwords to accounts or to the computers wireless router if they are someone who is computer literate in that manner or if they live in the same household as the little by simply changing the main password on the computer for the specified time that the punishment is to take place.

Most programs offer a logging ability such as with Yahoo instant messenger which can be turned on or off and will track the conversations that happen on your computer so the parent will know if the child has been online during the time that they weren't supposed to be. So even if you are unable to change passwords due to others using the computer system you can still check to see if your "child" has been following the punishment that you gave them.
